Learning About A Private Social Network

Hey Everyone,

I've created a sort of infographic/advertisement for parents. I am trying to primarily focus on the chat aspect of the website, it's security, and how easy it is to sign up and get started. I'm also including one of the first training videos via a link (as the main focus of this is the training aspect). The video is the first of many that will teach the functionality of the website.

I kept the graphic basic in order to get my point across without being too flashy. Typically I would also add a "get started here" link with the email.

Lastly, I tried to touch upon the problems with current social media sites and why a parent chat forum is not hosted on one of the most current social platforms.

Hi Christopher,

I think this will be such a great resource for the parents of your school!

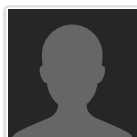

I think your infographic really shares the key features you are wanting to focus on well. The colors are engaging and you share specific ways in which parents would benefit from the site. I think the icons are clear as to what they are representing. I see your mention of adding a "get started here" link with the email. Might it also be helpful to add a contact for any questions and/or perhaps a link to an FAQ?

Great job on getting started on your tutorials as well! I think this one is very clear as to how to get started on the site.

Best,

Aimee

Hey Aimee,

Great suggestion! I always forget about adding a "contact" or "FAQ" link.

Chris,

You've shared some useful resources for your training module. The tutorial video fits well with the type of learning you are focusing on. It is important to design for multiple learning styles, which the video/tutorial format considers. The infographic includes important information in a short, easy to follow graphic. I look forward to seeing how you integrate each of these media support pieces into your training.

Thank you Dr. Hruskocy,

I plan to have printed instruction included in my final product as well!
